Tabling — Music — Signing the Before-I-Die Wall

Thursday, March 13, 2014

Dance & Performances

included offerings from the Muslim, Jewish, and Native American students, a deaf professor communicating in braille, and artistic offerings of West African Fely Tchaco, Japanese students, and diverse improvisation performers.

The Thursday noontime of respectful expression, arts, spirit, and mutual recognition attracted the attention of Leslie Wong, President of San Francisco State University, and prepared the atmosphere for Friday's concluding Dialogue experience.

Creating Our Campus Community
An Experience of Being Heard and Face-to-Face Relationship Building

Facilitated by Libby and Len Traubman
 Co-founders of the 21-year-old Jewish-Palestinian Living Room Dialogue

Join us for an evening of dinner, stories, listening, and learning

Friday, 14 March 2014
 5:30-8:30pm

Location: Dialogue Room in the Richard Oakes Multicultural Center

Libby and Len Traubman for 25 years have facilitated communication between "enemies" including Soviets and Americans, Armenians and Azerbaijanis, and Palestinians and Israelis - Muslims, Christians and Jews. Their work has inspired many others to begin sustained dialogue groups on campuses and in communities around the world.

Friday Evening, March 14, 2014
 Face-to-Face Dialogue Experience

Our United People For Peace invites people of all nations, races, religions, and genders to help the world accomplish peace. Peace may seem far away, especially in times of war, but it may be more near than we think. Our purpose is not only to learn ourselves but to teach the world to be faithful to love, peace and harmony, not despite our differences but because of them. Being present for one another we can counter war, hunger, poverty and hatred, driven not by fear of the unknown, but by love we seek to share.

Our Objectives are:

- To strengthen networks within organizations and individuals
- To work for peace within ourselves as students and in a community
- To explore ideas about peace through creativity.
- To develop a sense of belonging to school, local and global communities.
